AXIS POWERS APPEAR TO HOLD THE INITIATIVE IN BOTH THE RUSSIAN AND THE PACIFIC THEATRES OF WAR

Navy Communique Reveals Grim Character of Allied Position on Guadalcanal Island—Henderson Field, Strategic Airfield, Under Fire

By International News Service

Crucial military decisions trembled in the balance today on two widely separated fronts. Along the Volga River desperately fighting Red Army men again gave ground after temporarily halting the German drive on Stalingrad, but there was little news from the Solomon Islands where U. S. Marine and Army forces were locked in grim battle with Japanese invaders.

In both the Russian and Pacific war theatres the Axis powers appeared to hold the initiative.

A Navy communique revealed the grim character of the Allied position on Guadalcanal Island where Henderson Field, the strategic airfield commanding the area, was reported under fire of Japanese heavy gun.

And 260 miles to the northwest additional enemy fleet units were gathering for an undoubted additional assault on the island. Tokyo reports, relayed by Berlin, claimed the capture of Henderson Field, but the claim was doubted in Washington.

It was denied, inferentially, by Secretary of the Navy Knox who declared that latest reports made it clear that "a real stiff, tough fight is going on out there." Asked if he thought the American forces could hold, he replied: "I certainly hope so and expect so."

Navy men assumed that our fleet will soon be in action against the powerful Japanese forces menacing the Solomons, and it was considered likely that the war's greatest sea battle may develop.

Farm School To Open Harvest Fete Today

Stressing its contribution to wartime food needs and to the training of needed farm manpower, the National Farm School, Bucks county, will hold its Harvest Festival and 45th annual meeting today and tomorrow.

Harold B. Allen, president of the school, which was founded to train "city boys of limited means," has extended an invitation to the public to attend a comprehensive farm products exhibit today and a speaking program tomorrow afternoon.

This year "to compensate in a measure for the fact that no Bucks County Fair was held," the exhibit will be broadened to include entries by such organizations as the Grange, 4H Clubs, Future Farmers of America, Boy Scouts and others, Allen said.

Bristol Soldier Plays On Brookley Field XI

A soldier now in training in a southern camp writes as follows:

Brookley Field,
Mobile, Ala.,
October 14, 1942.

The Editor
The Bristol Courier
Dear Sir:

I am a Bristol boy and I am glad to report that I am doing all right in the Army Air Corps. I am at Brookley Field which is in Mobile, Ala. . . . I passed my physical test to become an aerial gunner which is really some "physical" to pass.

I am also on the Brookley Field football team. We played Troy State Teachers College last Friday under the lights at Troy, and we were defeated in our opening game. I am now waiting to be sent to school to become an aerial gunner. I played all my football with St. Ann's as an end. I am also playing end on this football team. We are coached by Kopcha, who played guard for the Chicago Bears for 7 years. He is also a captain here. I am the son of Mr. Joseph Plebani.

I am very proud of being a Bristol boy.

MILITARISTIC STRAIN OF PRUSSIANS TRACED FOR CLUB; SPEAKER CONSIDERS "PRUSSIAN MENACE, PAST AND PRESENT"

Able presenting "The Prussian Menace—Past and Present," Warren P. Lutz, Philadelphia, at the meeting of The Travel Club yesterday afternoon, traced the evolutionary development of Prussianism, and showed its typical manifestations and effects.

Mr. Lutz, a graduate electrical engineer of Lehigh University, a statistical analyst, a veteran of World War I and a member of Yeaton Post of the American Legion, as a hobby does much research work along historic lines. He was introduced yesterday by Mrs. Horace H. Burton.

Following his salutation to the audience of club-women, Mr. Lutz immediately addressed them in the manner in which the present-day Nazi leaders see Americans, and continued by explaining that Germany is peopled by individuals who are not fully understood by the rest of the world.

Going back to the year 9 A. D., to the period when battles between the Romans and German tribes from the Black Forest changed the course of history, Mr. Lutz told how the Germans of that day worshipped the Gods Thor and Wotan. The two types of German, even in that early centuries, as today, were the Saxon and the Prussian, the former being fair-haired and of peaceful inclination, and the latter war-like and domineering. "The Saxons of that early day had previously been conquered by the Romans and had been subjected to Roman culture. In fact there was 800 years difference in the cultural background of the Saxons as compared to the Prussians." In considering the Christian influence on the early Saxons, the speaker mentioned that the line of cleavage between them and the Prussian strain was most pronounced. "In fact, the war-like instinct has always been noted in the Prussians. The Romans invented the word 'barbarian' to describe the Prussians who frequently overran the protective wall and attacked the Romans."

Mr. Lutz pointed out that although Rome was expanded by means of the sword, she did however give the world what it thirsted for—peace and security. "As a result, Rome lasted for 1,000 years." He reminded that many of the so-called basic rights we are fighting for were part of the early Roman life, such as a government of elected representatives making laws for the masses of the people, the right of trial by jury, development of business contracts, etc. The plundering of the Roman city by the Prussian hordes as they became bolder was described, "with Rome in years to follow waxing fat and becoming weak. All the while the barbarian Prussians became stronger, they eventually sweeping up to the gates of Rome." The first and second sieges of the city were described, with the resultant stiff peace terms granted by the Prussians. The attacks years later on Rome by the Huns were included in the historical account, "the huge death toll being a record one." The speaker continued in his presentation down to 476 A. D., the year of the fall of the Roman empire, due to the softness of its people.

The period when Martin Luther came upon the scene, 1517, was also considered from a historical standpoint, "it being characteristic of the Prussians to resist any authority other than their own." The 30-year religious war, a bitter family internecine strife ending in the Peace of Westphalia showed also the war-like attitude of the people, the Prussian population falling by 30% while the population of the rest of Europe increased by 25%.

The belief of Frederick Wilhelm I in the militaristic scheme of things when he came to power in 1712, was mentioned. "But that ruler never used his army for anything but as an internal police force. His son, Frederick the Great, however, used the Prussian army for aggression, and had his people at war for 19 years during his reign. How the first blitzkrieg was demonstrated on the scene."

President Lair announced the appointment of F. Gordon Shaw, of 529 Crown street, as a member of the Board of Adjustment, in connection with the zoning ordinance. Shaw will fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of B. W. Meredith.

Council voted that the Capitol View Fire Company be permitted to remove a steel tower located in the rear of the firehouse, which has been deteriorating and is in a dangerous condition.

It was decided that a division of the current fire taxes which have been collected be made, and that Capitol View Fire Company receive $1,200, with the Union Fire Company receiving the same amount.

The report of the Board of Health for the period during September 2 to October 5 showed that there were no contagious or reportable diseases. Five health certificates were issued, five continued on page four.

SUIT RESULTS FROM FOOT BEING FRACTURED

Action in Trespass is Filed in Court of Common Pleas

ALSO DIVORCE CASE

DOYLESTOWN, Oct. 17—An action in trespass, the alleged result of a man's fall due to a hole in the ground, was filed in the Court of Common Pleas here this week. A divorce action filed is a second case in the local courts.

Claiming damages amounting to $5,000, Eugene Smith, Torresdale avenue, Philadelphia, has named Robert M. Platt, Bustleton avenue and City Line, Somerton, Southampton township, trading as Somerton Springs, the defendant in an action in trespass.

The plaintiff alleges that on June 22, 1941, he caught his right foot in a hole in a grass plot and sustained a fracture of the right foot.

Two defendants, W. W. Walsh, 4633 Tampa street, Philadelphia, and Chester Brewery, Inc., 2409 West Second street, Chester, have been named in the statement of claim filed by two defendants.

LATEST NEWS BULLETINS

Avert Flood Disaster at Washington

Washington—A major flood disaster was averted in the nation's capital today as surging waters of the Potomac River climbed to a flood crest of 26.78 feet and then began slowly to recede.

The crest, which was just short of the record 1936 level which caused $10,000,000 in damage, was reached as capital workers made their way to their offices during the early morning hours.

Workers, directed by President Roosevelt after a personal tour of the flood areas to spare no effort to keep the flood from the capital, toiled through the night erecting sandbag barriers and other safeguards.

34 Workmen Hurt

Pittsburgh—At least 34 workmen were hurt and several score more escaped possible death or serious injury today when 60 tons of molten metal spilled into a pool of water and exploded with a shattering roar in the open hearth section of Continental Roll and Steel Foundry Company's Duquesne works at nearby Coraopolis.

The force of the blast blew 300 feet of metal roof off the building. Plant police said that if the force of the blast had spread along the ground instead of straight up, a huge death list would probably have resulted. Most of those injured were either burned by the shower of molten metal, or were suffering from concussion and shock. None of the injured was in serious condition.

P. R. R. CLAIMS SERVICE CAN'T BE IMPROVED NOW

Representative Sent Here To Confer With Burgess C. L. Anderson

MAKES LETTER PUBLIC

Train service as rendered Bristol by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and which has been a source of controversy here for the past several weeks, again came before the public today. Burgess Clifford L. Anderson, who has been ill, released correspondence which has passed between him and P. R. R. officials since October 1st, when Burgess Anderson took up the question.

The Burgess in his letter on October 1st wrote:

Bristol, Pa., Oct. 1, 1942

Mr. T. W. Howell,
Passenger Train Master,
Penna. R. R.,
Jersey City, N. J.
Dear Mr. Howell:

I have had a number of telephone calls and personal interviews with my neighbors and constituents over the fact that the train which formerly stopped at Bristol from New York at 12:44 P. M. has been taken off.

I personally use this train and I cannot understand why this train has been discontinued, as I know it has been patronized and it seems to me, that with the defense industries we have here, we should have at least one through express train from New York which makes a stop at Bristol.

As the schedule now stands, there is no through train from New York other than the 8:03 A. M., stopping at Bristol at 9:50 A. M. Another local leaving New York at 3:29 P. M. and arriving in Bristol at 5:18 P. M. Another local leaving New York at 5:08 P. M., arriving in Bristol at 6:29 P. M.

It seems inconceivable that a community such as ours and one as important as ours in defense work and otherwise, should have such exceedingly poor train service, and I would like you to inform me, so I may answer the numerous complaints which I receive, why one decent train, the 12:44 P. M., was taken off.

Yours very truly,
CLIFFORD L. ANDERSON.

Burgess Anderson was visited by Harry S. Heiser, Assistant Passenger Train Master from Jersey City. The two had a long conversation at which time the pros and cons of improving the service here were given.

The argument of Mr. Heiser was to the effect that it is impossible to

Sister Laurentina, Former Bristolian, Laid To Rest

Tribute was paid on Saturday last to Sister Laurentina, who died in Philadelphia the previous Thursday. Sister Laurentina, who was born Mary McKeon, daughter of the late John and Mary McKeon, Bristol, in 1870, was educated in the Academy of the Sacred Heart, Torresdale.

The nun who "mothered a neighborhood" in the vicinity of South Philadelphia from Mifflin street to Oregon avenue, and from 20th street to Broad, succumbed in St. Agnes' Hospital, a victim of pneumonia.

Men and women of all creeds miss Sister Laurentina, her work covering such a wide variety of duties, aiding the needy and helping all who sought aid. She was supervisor of St. Monica's Day Nursery, at 1613 Porter street, Philadelphia. She frequently told how when funds were low she would pray for help to keep her work going, then make telephone calls.

Mass was said in the Convent of the Immaculate Heart of Mary, West Chester; and burial was made in the Community Cemetery, Philadelphia.

SIX HEIRS TO SHARE ESTATE OF WOMAN; DIED IN DOYLESTOWN

Louisa A. James Willed Estate of $1,000 to Six Persons

THE MUNCE WILL

Children Inherit Estate of Mrs. Catherine Munce, Bristol

DOYLESTOWN, Oct. 17—Six heirs, Mary J. M. Roberts, Robert C. James, Helen J. Lear, Carrie J. Shellenberger, Margaret J. Smith and Elizabeth J. McKinstry, will share in the $1,000 estate left by Louisa A. James, who died here September 11th.

Miss James, who named Carrie J. Shellenberger, Elizabeth J. McKinstry and Mary J. M. Roberts, executrices, executed her will March 15th.

With two daughters, Marion, who was given a house at 308 York Road, Burlington, N. J.; and Suzy, who was given various household possessions, and a son, George, who was also given possessions, the will of Catherine Munce, Bristol, was probated here disposing of a $700 personal estate. Marion Munce Hartless, 526 Swain street, Bristol, was named executrix.

A granddaughter, S. Marion Hoffman, 38 Green street, Sellersville, was bequeathed the $100 personal and $1400 real estate holdings of Malinda Groff, Sellersville. The testatrix died September 6th.

Mrs. Abbie A. Farnum, 194 Shewell avenue, this place, will inherit the $2500 personal estate of her husband, the Rev. Irving B. Farnum, retired Congregational clergyman, who died here September 11th.

Two sons, Dennis and John McGee, will share the $500 real estate holdings of Mary C. McGee, Bristol. John C. McGee, 636 Pine street, Bristol, was named executor. The will was executed January 9, 1931.

The $3000 personal and $1400 real estate holdings of Ethel S. Stuckey, Telford, will be inherited by a daughter, Beula E. Stuckey, who will receive the property and three children, Preston H., Beula E. and Maurice H. Stuckey. The executrix, Beula E. Stuckey, lives at 577 South Main street, Telford.

The widow, Agnes Barclay, will share the $2200 personal estate of her husband, James H. Barclay, Bensalem township. The widow, who was also named the executrix, lives near Bristol, R. D. 2.

With the exception of a bequest of $1 to a son, Frank J. Weimer, the $100 personal and $3,000 real estate holdings of Conrad Weimer, Middletown township, will be inherited by the widow, Augusta Weimer, Walter V. McConighy, Langhorne, R. D. 1, was named the executor.

The $6500 personal estate of Ernest P. Schulz, Springfield township, will be inherited by a son, Ernest Bernhard, who will receive $1200, and the balance to the son, Ernest, and Emeline Marie. A trust fund was created for Emeline Marie who is to receive the principal January 1, 1951. Ernest B. Schulz was named the executor.

Letters of administration in the estate of Asher B. Walter, Plumstead township, were granted to Herbert P. Kugler, Point Pleasant, amounting to $3,000. The heirs include two nieces, Sallie Zettlemoyer and Laura Smith, and two nephews, Herbert Walter and William Slutter.

Many Pay Respects To The Late C. A. Johnson

TULLYTOWN, Oct. 17—A large number of relatives and friends on Thursday evening paid respects to Christopher A. Johnson, who died in a Philadelphia Hospital on Tuesday. Many visited the Johnson home during the evening; and floral pieces were numerous.

Service here and interment in Camden, N. J., yesterday afternoon, were private.

The bearers included: Kent, Cedric and Francis Bodine; Thomas Brennan, and Messrs. Menis and Horner.

Mr. Johnson, who was known to many, was president of Tullytown Fire Co., and secretary of Tullytown Board of Health.

Dinner Party Arranged For Fred Barlow, Jr.

CROYDON, Oct. 17—A dinner party was held in honor of Fred Barlow, Jr., at the home of his sister, Mrs. Emanuel Mathis, on Monday evening.

BOOMERANG STRATEGY

On June 22, 1941, Hitler attacked Russia, and thereby he rejected his last chance of successfully invading England. If he had the power to attack Russia, which had been preparing for the inevitable war longer even than the Nazis, certainly he had the power to invade an England which had not yet found its second wind and had not acquired the complete assistance of the United States.

Russia was not attacked because Hitler hated Communism. Nazism is too close to the other totalitarian regimes to deplore them that sincerely. Russia was attacked because militant Germany could not countenance a power of equal military might in Europe. The real German game in this war has been to acquire the supremacy of Europe. Then, if that did not bring peacetime economic supremacy for Germany over the entire world, a third war was to be perpetrated. The attack on Russia was more than an ideological crusade, though Hitler hoped by sending Hess that he could decoy England out of the war, and also divert the United States.

The Russian army proved as strong as Germany's and the bulk of the German forces are now tied down in Russia. Hitler has changed his course toward a race for oil and he probably would be content to continue this one-front war in Europe if the Allies would permit it. Yet if Germany prefers to fight Russia rather than England, how much longer will she have her way?

Britain has revived since Dunkerque, and the industrial potential of Britain and the United States is constantly rising.

When those fogs in the Atlantic lift and disclose a swarm of Yankee fighters, the Japs will realize that it is warmer.

The proposed income tax check-off on pay checks has all the earmarks of having been inspired by labor union tactics.

At the present rate of progress about the time an adequate supply of synthetic rubber is produced, someone will invent a substitute.

If any of those eastern political candidates who have special ration cards do run out of fuel they can talk through the gas feed lines.

New York city restaurants, night clubs and hotels want a meatless day a week instead of meat rationing for public eating places. Another idea would be to use War Stamps for rationing coupons in restaurants.

GIRL IN THE GREEN COAT by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

SYNOPSIS

Gil Castle, society playboy, is murdered in Jan Proust's music studio in the Kollar Building. Returning home around midnight, Mary Driscoll, a reporter, had a feeling that someone was in the shadows watching her as she reached Jan's second-floor landing. Then the door of the vacant studio opposite his closed slowly. Terrified, Mary ran up to the fifth-floor studio she shared with Peggy Hudson, an interior decorator. Next morning, the tragedy is discovered. All the tenants, except Jan, had spent the night in the building despite the management's order prohibiting sleeping on the premises. Mary telephones her office, but the thrill of a news beat is missing. She had been in love with Gil ever since she met him on a boat five years ago, but the feeling was not mutual. What had brought Gil to the shabby studio building—unless to see Jan? But Jan had flown to Hollywood for a concert that night. Certainly Gil wasn't interested in the other tenants. Emilie Raymond, the commercial artist, was the most attractive but she had half a dozen suitors and as far as Mary knew, Gil wasn't one of them. Emilie confided in Mary and Peg that Jan had given her a key to his studio so she could practice there while he was away, but she didn't use it. To shield the girl, Peggy drops the key down the drain in Emilie's washroom. Later, Peg stuns Mary with the news that she thought she heard Mary talking to Jan in his studio about nine o'clock the night of the killing, and went to join them. The door was open but no one was there. Mary is assigned to check the "love-nest" angle of the case. Gil had been involved with Ynez, a dancer. There were other characters too. Gil's mother sends for Mary. The old lady believes the murderer is a woman. Chris Hall, a reporter and Gil's best friend, calls on Mrs. Castle while Mary is there. Gil had told him, the night before, he was going to break with some girl but mentioned no name. Back at the office, Mary's editor says he believes a society woman committed the crime. "I don't believe it's a woman at all," Mary answered as she went to her desk to work. Mary's story continues:

CHAPTER ELEVEN

Josh came in before I was through and made a few changes in my story that I knew Mrs. Castle would not like.

"And get a story out of Proust as soon as he shows," he said. You can phone. Don't bother to come down until I send for you. Stick around and keep your eyes open. And get a good night's rest tonight."

"Undoubtedly—of a certainty—in that ghost-haunted, rat-infested tenement!"

"Don't go female on me," Josh advised, and then he looked again at the name he'd written down when I told him about meeting the Express' new man at the Castle's. "And it's a funny thing, I can't place that name at all."

"Maybe he's just pretending he's a newspaperman. Maybe he's one of the Castle dicks."

"And that may not be a joke," Josh said. "Keep an eye on him if you see him around."

As Chris Hall was the first person on whom I set eyes as I walked up the stairs—well lighted tonight at 9:35, I didn't think it would prove very hard. He was talking to Inspector Hare, who was a lot more pleasant to him than he had been to the rest of us.

They were leaning over a pair of stained water-soaked men's gloves, spread out on a newspaper. "I think they are his, all right," Hall was saying. "I noticed he was taking off a pair of light tan pigskins as he came into the library where I was waiting for him. They were new, and he caught my eye."

"I can soon check on it," Hare said.

Hall smiled up at me and rose. "Nice little touch. Whoever did the job wanted to get rid of these gloves."

"But why? And how did they get all wet?"

Hare mumbled something, but Chris Hall said:

"The last of the plumbers were leaving as I got here. The plumbing back-fired or something, and they fished these out."

"So it was an inside job . . . one of us!" I said.

"That's the way it points now," Hare said. He smiled, unpleasantly.

It was, as might have been expected, a nice, cozy night.

Peggy said that nearly everybody in the place had bought a new, patent bolt for his door, and I wished that we had, too. Peg said, "Nonsense!" but not in her usual forthright manner.

She was upset because there was a rumor around the building that Jan did not sleep in his room at the Ambassador last night and that no one in Los Angeles had seen him after his performance until morning, and some idiot advanced the theory that he had flown up to San Francisco and murdered Gil Castle, and then flown back to Los Angeles again.

"Sounds like one of Utz's theories. I suppose Jan knew that Gil would be in his studio, begging to be shot at 11 o'clock!"

"Don't think I think so," Peggy said, worriedly, "but it's plausible enough to some people. They might even have had an appointment. Oh dear, dear, I hope he has a good alibi. Everyone is acting so funny. I sort of wish we had a pistol around here," she said, and that was the only laugh I'd had all day.

"A pistol and it would be a toss up which of us would be the first woman to die in California's new gas chamber!"

Hysterically, like a couple of frightened, silly school girls, we laughed until we were helpless. And then Peg gave me all the details on the plumbing excitement and Emilie Raymond whispering "Merciful heaven, did my key do it?"

We had another faintly hysterical laugh over that, and Peg said that she had invited Emilie to come up and spend the night with us, as Miss Martin and Madame Hurd were going to sleep in Madame Hurd's studio, and it seemed kind of mean to leave Emilie alone, but she said she wasn't nervous.

"Well, it's all over now and there's nothing to be excited about," Peg said. "I'm a little worried about fire, that's all. It would be awful to be roasted like rats in a trap, way up here!"

"Fire! What put that idea in your head?"

"Oh, someone might set the building on fire. Arson, you know, to destroy the evidence."

I said I thought last night would have been the logical time for that. "Mm . . . maybe. Mary, do you think Mr. McMurphy has a vicious face?"

"McMurphy? No! Why?"

"Well, I don't think so either, but there's a picture in a detective story magazine somebody left here, of a man who looks so much like him it's uncanny. It's an axe-murderer who killed two young girls. Of course it's just a resemblance. This man I mean was hanged last year!"

"Peg, please!"

"Oh, you scarebaby, I said he was hanged last year!"

We sat around worrying until well past midnight, because we did not want to turn off the lights. Then we went to sleep and in two minutes she was asleep and I lay rigid and wide-eyed listening to every sound.

I must have dozed off around two o'clock. Peg's fingers were digging right into my shoulder. I had black and blue marks that lasted for weeks. "Someone is trying to get in the window," she whispered.

Without sitting up I could see the window, a double one that we usually open, but closed and locked to-night because it gives on the fire-escape and even Peg didn't want to take the chance.

I looked, and there, no nightmare, but stark reality, was a man standing on the fire-escape. Our twin beds weren't four feet from him, on the other side of the glass.

Both Peg and I have since thought of all the things we should have done, but she did her bit when she woke me, and I had just one idea.

With fairly firm fingers I grasped the telephone on the bed-table and crawling under the covers with it so that my voice wouldn't be heard I managed to dial the operator and ask for "police!"

"The Rollar building, did you say the ROLLAR building?" the officer at the other end of the wire asked. He meant, of course, "The place where you had the murder yesterday?"

"Yes, yes," I managed to say, "Come quick!" and was just emerging from the covers, still clutching the telephone when Peg began to scream at the top of her lungs and I got clear of blankets just in time to see a foot disappearing up-ward to the roof.

What did I always think about that building? Once they went to bed and locked their doors you could be murdered and chopped into bits and not a soul would come to your rescue. Peg screamed loud enough to wake the entire building, and she kept on screaming for what seemed like hours to me, until she finally got out of breath.

After an eternity there was a pounding on the hall door and a man's voice called, "Are you all right in there?"

"Who is it?" I managed to whisper.

"Police officer," came another voice.

"It's a trap, don't open the door," Peg said, her teeth rattling, and I did think it was a bit soon for the police to arrive.

"How do I know who you are?" I asked, at the keyhole.

"Open up, Miss Driscoll, it's me—Chris Hall, and Officer Turner," the voice we had heard first said, and then I recognized it as Hall's.

Peg slipped into the bathrobe she lays neatly at the foot of her bed and went to open the door and I groped for something, emerging with my jade mottle housecoat, far too elegant for the occasion, as the two came in.

They were in the basement when Peg began to scream, and it was probably some kind of screaming record that enabled them to hear her, six flights down. We managed to indicate what had happened and the officer flung open the window and looked up and down, then mounted to the roof, with Hall after him.

About this time I heard a car coming and looked out of the front window in the living-room, to see the riot squad with sawed-off shotguns, piling into the entrance. They had to wait for Hall to climb in and run downstairs to let them in.

Of course the man, whoever he was, had gone. You can easily swing from one roof to another, and they all have fire escapes or stairways. And all this time not a soul opened a door to find out what was wrong, with all this running and all Peg's screaming. What pals!

"You couldn't identify the man if you saw him again, could you?" the special officer who was with Hall asked.

We had to admit we couldn't, it was too dark.

"Sure you didn't imagine it?" Hall asked, smiling a little.

"Good Lord, no!" we both cried in chorus.

Luncheon Features Session
Of New Hope Women's Club

LUMBERVILLE, Oct. 17—Approximately 50 members and guests attended the first meeting of the season of the New Hope Women's Club held Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. William Tinsman, here.

The meeting, in charge of the president, Mrs. H. E. Blackmar, was featured by a covered dish luncheon, and following this Mrs. Blackmar introduced Mrs. Walter W. Ely, president of the Bucks County Federation of Women's Clubs, who gave a brief report of the State Federation of Women's Clubs held in Harrisburg last May. She explained also what the General Federation and the State Federation expect of the subordinate clubs during the current year.

During the social hour a game, during which the members guessed the names of titles of books, was conducted by Mrs. Annie Ansey and Miss Elizabeth Smith.

Hostesses were Mrs. Reuben Stever and Miss Mary Quinby.

The meeting of the club will be held at the Art Associates' Gallery, here, on Nov. 4, when masterpieces of art will be illustrated by Miss Gertrude Carey. Hostesses will be Mrs. R. Sloan Bredin, Mrs. Stephen Hoyt and Miss Bessie G. Phillips.

She handed me a long white card where the answers were checked and sent me to another chair. A nurse took my temperature, pulse (I was sure I had been jumping fences), blood pressure and blood count, then sterilized the patch.

Another attendant led me to a bed which looked very inviting if they would only give me a pillow. "Ready now, doctor," she called, and before I knew what had happened the doctor had injected something into my arm. "Novocain," he said, smiling, "so you won't feel the transfusion needle." The nurse came back carrying a muslin sack and the doctor pulled out a pint bottle and sterilized rubber tubes and needles. He fitted the needles into the tubes, and then there was a slight pressure on the forearm.

"Going to stick me now?" we ask. "It's all done," he said, "and the blood is running nicely." He held the bottle up so we could see it and remarked, "Now don't tell me you've got blue blood, because I've heard that a thousand times. Everybody's blood is blue when you take it out of a vein."

Gosh, why hadn't I done this before! It was simple.

FOR WOMEN ONLY

MILWAUKEE—(INS)—What is believed to be the first health and safety manual for women war workers has just been issued by Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing company. Titled "Women Safe at Work," it tells, among other things, how to eat and sleep, what clothes to wear on the job, how to keep up morale, and how to perform various lifting and carrying operations.

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE
Blackouts and air raids mingle with intimate family life and human interest episodes, enlivened by comedy moments, in "Mrs. Miniver," dramatic story of the heroism of English families under attack on the home front, which teams Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon, today at the Grand Theatre. The picture is adapted from the famous novel by Jan Struther.

A new glamour girl and a promising new acting discovery are featured with Lionel Barrymore, Philip Dorn, Donna Reed and a large cast in "Calling Dr. Gillespie," dramatic medical mystery, showing Sunday at the Grand Theatre.

BRISTOL THEATRE
"Atlantic Convoy," story of the flying Marines fighting submarines off Iceland, is ending its Bristol Theatre run today. Jammed with break-neck action and fabulous adventure, the new thriller features Bruce Bennett, Virginia Field and John Beal.

Another slam-bang Rangebaster opus, "Tonto Basin Outlaws" starring Ray "Crash" Corrigan, John "Dusty" King, and Max "Alibi" Terhune, is now at the Bristol.

"Flight Lieutenant," new aviation drama with Pat O'Brien, Glenn Ford and Evelyn Keyes, opens tomorrow at the Bristol.

RITZ THEATRE

Everyone wants to see the low-down story of this high class gal. Crowds have been rushing to the Ritz Theatre to see Ginger Rogers as "Roxie Hart," the girl who became a national pastime. All attendance records have been broken, and the film will be held over an additional week.

BENSALEM HIGH SCORES VICTORY OVER JENKINTOWN, BEATING RIVALS BY THE SCORE OF 6 TO 0 IN NIGHT GAME

By T. M. June

JENKINTOWN, Oct. 17—A blocked kick paved the way for the only score of the game here last night as the Bensalem Township high school scored a surprising 6-0 victory over Jenkintown High in an arc light battle.

The lone touchdown came in the first period shortly after the game began. Jenkintown was forced back into its own territory in the first period and was attempting to boot out of danger after a "sleeper" play had failed.

But as Fitzgerald attempted to kick, three Bensalem linemen rushed in and blocked the kick. The ball rolled back to the seventeen yard line where there was a pile-up. But underneath the pile stood Elmer Geiges with his hands clutched tightly around the ball.

On the first play, Jenkintown was off-sides and the ball was moved to the 12-yard line. Hutton sliced tackle without a gain. Deans carried it to the one yard line on the next play but Bensalem was off-sides. Rohem then went through the center of the Jenkintown line for a touchdown. The try for the extra point by Vinson failed.

The boys of Vince Taggart outnumbered Bensalem in first downs, 11-10. But most of the Drakes' downs were the result of a strong passing attack. Taggart had many more substitutes than Coach Wetherhold and on several occasions substituted an entire team to replace his tiring eleven.

But despite all this the Owls were determined for victory. They made a gallant stand near their goal line just before the first half ended and had a touchdown taken away because of a penalty and still it threatened to score on several other plays.

A penalty for holding caused a sensational run by "Hughie" Deans to go to waste in the second quarter. From his eighteen yard line, Deans went off-tackle. He broke through the line, sidestepped the Jenkintown full-back, and then snake-bumped the entire secondary defense to come out into the open with several Jenkintown players chasing him. He ran the entire distance of 82 yards to score but Umpire Henry had detected Geiges holding and the play was recalled with the Owls getting a 15 yard penalty.

It was a heart-breaking decision for Hughie Deans whose playing was the whole offense for the Blue and White. In the final period, again paced by Deans, Bensalem carried the ball from their own five yard where Deans intercepted a pass to the Jenkintown six yard line where the ball was placed when the game ended. During this drive, Deans made several nice runs and the Owls should have scored but two 15 yard penalties set them back.

But despite the Bensalem ball-running, the Drakes were ever threatening. In the first quarter after the Owls' touchdown, they started a drive of their own. Bickley had a nice run-back of the kickoff and with Fitzgerald doing the bulk of the work made three successive first downs to carry the pigskin to the 10 yard line.

Two plays by Bickley moved the ball to the six yard line but the Bensalem line stiffened and Jenkintown went into the air for its final two attempts and both aerials were grounded.

After sea-sawing on several kicks, Bensalem again had a chance to score when H. Deans intercepted a pass on his own 40 and then heaved a pass to Adrian which was good for 30 yards. Rohem went through the center of the Jenkintown forward wall for a first down on the home team's 19. After three line plays failed, Hutton heaved a pass to Robinson. Robinson allowed the ball to slip through his hands and he was over the goal line at the time, losing another touchdown for Bensalem.

At the start of the second half, Jenkintown appeared to be a new team as it started an offensive drive from its own 27 yard line for four consecutive first downs and a pass, Fitzgerald to Bickley, which put the ball on the Bensalem 26 yard line. "Whitey" Fitzgerald took a crack at the Bensalem line and moved up to the 13 yard line but here the Owls held for downs.

But the Drakes weren't through yet for immediately after Bensalem booted out of danger, a beautiful kick which went to the Jenkintown 25 yard line, they again went on the offensive and two nice passes, Farrow to Holmes and Holmes to Carns brought the ball back to the Wetherhold 30 yard line. But here Deans stepped in to intercept the pass and start Bensalem off to its final drive which reached the six-yard line before the game ended.

Militaristic Strain of Prussians Traced for The Travel Club

veloped when the Prussians attacked Silesia was told of Bismarck, "one of the world's greatest figures, a schemer and maker of empires," was given consideration. The dominant desire of Bismarck was mentioned as that of making Prussia supreme over the German empire, and then to make that empire supreme over other European countries.

Reaching the period of Kaiser Wilhelm I, prior to World War I, the speaker showed his militaristic views through quotations of that German ruler. "The Kaiser believed he was called by God to 'civilize' the world. The Kaiser wrote: 'Those who oppose me in this work I shall crush.' And at another time: 'There is only one law and that is my law.' Yet, when the time of the start of World War I arrived the Kaiser stated: 'The sword is being thrust into our hands.'"

Continued Mr. Lutz: "At another time the Kaiser was heard to say 'On me, the German emperor, the spirit of God has descended.' Yet while he spoke the neutrality of Belgium was being violated in order to beat England to the draw. . . . In 1918 a German writer said 'The democratic nations must disappear because they put their faith in illusions, more particularly the illusions of peace and justice. There is only one reality in this world—force!'

High-lights of "the three present-day Caesars" were mentioned by the speaker, the aggressive attitude of Hirohito, Mussolini and Hitler being considered. "The sawdust Caesar, Mussolini, has been significantly silent ever since the decadent British lion, to use his own words, sank two or three Italian battleships or a few cruisers every time it thrashed its tail."

"And we find Hitler in addition to his dream of world domination, is setting himself up as a leader in Germany of a new religion which is to replace Christianity there. . . . In Germany for generations they have preferred guns to butter. In our land for generations we have preferred butter to guns."

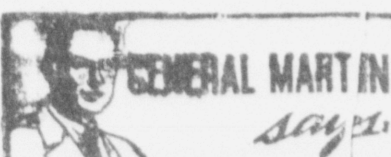

"But now let us come away from that war-mind country, Germany, back to America where each man can live his life and speak his thoughts. We have a job ahead. There is a great war to be won, and a price to pay. And not until that war is won and the menace of things militaristic defeated can we say 'Your land and my land.'"

A short business meeting followed with Mrs. Henry T. Neher, vice-president, presiding in the absence of Mrs. E. Linton Martin.

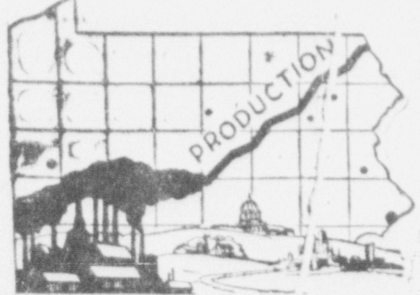

Mrs. Richard T. Myers and Mrs. Russell DeLong were named as delegates to the meeting of Bucks County Federation of Women's Clubs to be held at Yardley on October 30th. Mrs. Carl Poell reported on the sessions of the Southeastern District Federation of Penna. Women, held in Lancaster in September. The chairman of war services for the local club, Mrs. Franklin Wallin, told of various tasks in which members can participate, as an aid to the war effort, suggesting assistance to the ration board, aircraft spotting, Red Cross duties, control center work, etc. Those wishing to be of service may contact Mrs. Wallin. The presiding officer, Mrs. Neher, spoke of the responsibility and privilege of voting, urging all to take advantage of the ballot.

Hostesses yesterday were Mrs. Merrill Douglass and Mrs. Lewis J. DeVan.

As Governor of Pennsylvania I can promise you no more than that until this war is won. But I do tell you that whether we have war or peace in the next four years this State can have honest government and efficient government and a Square Deal for every Pennsylvanian."

BASEBALL'S HANDSOMEST

By Jeane Hofmann

NEW YORK, Oct. 17—(INS)—If you thought ball players were just a bunch of hefty lugs with shoulders so broad it looked as though they had the mumps on each blade, and faces which bore a rough resemblance to a relief map of the Himalayas, then you'd better look again, Oscar!

The girls don't think so. Four of them—tennis champ Alice Marble, swimmer Gloria Cullen, glamour gal Phyllis Adams, and Junior Miss actress Pat Pearson—got together the other day to choose the first all-American bathing—er, SHAVING beauty line-up.

After all, sports experts have been picking everything from pennant results to fingernails. They've had hooch calling contests and the queen of South Podunk Fruit Company. But nobody paid any attention to the romper-clad gentlemen who cavort every year in the World Series' October Olympics.

So our semi-nine committee, wearing blinders and peering through the knot-hole in the centerfield fence, got together to pick the handsomest ball player on the New York Yankee and St. Louis Cardinal teams. But when the returns were in and ballots counted, they were tied up tighter than a washerwoman's knot, between rival pitchers Marvin Brewer and Johnny Beasley. Gloria held out for the left-bleachers profile of Mr. Beasley. Which all goes to prove that women make up their faces easier than their minds.

However, for the benefit of the breathless public, here are the final results of the first annual Shaving Beauty Contest. We had to disqualify Alice Marble's nomination of Frank Crosetti because she voted for him five times. Kindly mail in four box seat covers and two foul tips, and the committee will forward you a ballot for next year's contest.

Catcher: Walker Cooper. The girls thought St. Louis's "power behind the thrown" had nice brown eyes. There is a vile rumor, started by Yankee fans, that they voted for him with his catcher's mask on.

Pitcher: Beasley and Brewer. However, they can't both pitch, so the girls moved Marvin out to shortstop. We hope Manager McCarthy doesn't mind. First base: Buddy Hassett, Yankee. That curly hair is he-manna from heaven.

Second base: Joe Gordon, Yankee. Tall, dark, and—thensome! Shortstop: Brewer, again. He gets around.

Third base: Tuck Stainback, Yankees (derailed from the outfield). Tuck's blonde hair, which made him Dream Boy of the third grade home-cooking class when he was a little tyke, won by a nod over Jimmy Brown's dimples.

Left field: Stan Musial, St. Louis. Phyllis held out for Charley Keller because she thought he looked like Ty Power—in a tin house mirror.

Center field: Terry Moore, St. Louis. Reported to be the Ladies Day-light of St. Louis.

Right field: Tom Henrich, Yankees. The draft got him first, but he's still batting .400 in the hearts and flowers league.

Manager: Erol Flynn, unmatched. Well—after all, the girls had to get some realism in here SOMEPLACE!

improve the train service here at this time and that the train which stops here at 12:27 p. m. fills the needs and requirements of the 12:44 which has been discontinued, except for the change at Trenton.

Mr. Heiser told Burgess Anderson that "trains have been taken off at other communities such as Bristol." The P. R. R. representative stated that the Company is short of manpower and also hauling power. Car shortage was another argument advanced and Mr. Heiser stated that he felt that the residents of Bristol should bear with the company and realize the tremendous amount of extra work and equipment required of the railroads to handle the war work and be willing to put up with some inconveniences.

Burgess Anderson states that in making public the correspondence and the result of his interview with Mr. Heiser that he in no way desires to handicap the work of any groups which are working for better train service.

The Exchange Club has a committee named to work for better train service and the "inadequate" service was discussed on the floor of Borough Council Monday evening at which time Burgess Anderson was named to represent that body.

No Report of Air Battle Over Dakar

Vichy—Vichy official circles "have no information" concerning a reported air battle over Dakar, it was stated authoritatively today. The statement was made in connection with a German-inspired report that fighting had started over Dakar.

The German rumor was based in turn on a Vichy Navy Ministry announcement that a French air force officer had been killed at Dakar.
